

Research several place-value number systems to discover their characteristics and limitations.

Compose a place-value system in which you design symbols for the basic working processes. Compare your new system with our base ten system. Write several paragraphs giving the advantages and disadvantages of both systems.

Demonstrate the use of this new system to the class. Write several problems using your system and have the class solve the problems. Read your paragraphs to the class.